Published in an edition of just under one thousand copies. [The book celebrates the 500th Anniversary of the Royal College of Physicians, and the 400th Anniversary of the College's "Pharmacopoea Londinensis" - the first pharmacopoeia to be mandatory for a whole country. This book contains specially commissioned paintings and drawings, and late medieval woodcuts, of nearly 200 plants growing in the Medicinal Garden of the College which were ingredients in the College's Pharmacopoea of 1618. Their contemporary uses are given from the publications of Nicholas Culpeper in 1649 and John Parkinson in 1640. The 17th century names of the 634 medicinal plants used in the Pharmacopoea have been painstakingly identified and listed with their modern botanical names - an invaluable resource for all interested in the history of plant-based medicine. The artists directory is included for all who seek commissions from them. Their work is a delight, as are the earlier woodcuts from Fuchs, Ruellius, Matthioli, Dodoens, Turner, Lyte, Gerard, Parkinson, Blackwell and Woodville.] [OUT OF PRINT] Beckenham 2018 £35.00
